

XXXI EURAGRI conference

Strategic management of agricultural and life sciences research organisations – interfaces, processes and contents

25-26 September 2017, TEAGASC Ashtown, Dublin Ireland

New developments - scientific, technical, societal and political - influence not only the agenda for research but also research structures, resource requirements (human and otherwise) , education and training programs and interfaces with partners and the users of research. They also have an impact on research funding and management and the way research is evaluated and monitored.

Teagasc and EURAGRI invite you to address the different dimensions of research management in the context of an evolving European research agenda. We wish to focus on the functions and challenges of research organisations concerning organisational and strategic management including planning and implementation.

We wish to discuss how changing research agendas influence what we do and how we do it. We want to create the opportunity to discuss a plurality of ideas, visions and experiences on how to execute the diverse demands and strategies. The Conference Programme should appeal to researchers, research managers, users and funders.
